

Dear FCC, I recently subscribed to XM radio and in only the first few days I've been using the service, I have found their traffic reports extremely useful and valuable since they are available continuously. They are also far more comprehensive than radio station reports since radio stations can't tell you about all areas of a large metropolitan area in the 30 seconds they have for a report.

Competition should be encouraged and the FCC and the NAB should stay out of this and let the market determine what people can listen to. I respectfully urge you to reject the NAB's petition 04-160. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Greg Tomlinson
